EVERY VISIT TO THE HOMESTEAD REVEALS NEW STORIES

Located in the City of Industry, the six-acre Homestead Museum was once part of a nearly 49,000-acre Mexican rancho. Between the 1840s and the 1920s, members of the Workman and Temple families called this place home. At the same time, they saw Los Angeles grow from a small Mexican pueblo to a major American city. Like others around them, they did their best to survive and thrive, which wasn’t always easy! Their family stories help us explore our own connections with history.

Throughout the year, the museum offers a variety of programs ranging from tours to special events like Ticket to the Twenties. Visit us online at homesteadmuseum.org to stay connected.
